Riccardo Mazza

Professor at the Scuola di Alto Perfezionamento Musicale di Saluzzo, nowadays he carries out an intense research activity whose most relevant results are addressed to the synthesis and audiovisual interaction of complex digital elements. For this purpose it has created numerous software that allow to treat and manage these elements within a structured language.

Among his researches we can mention “Renaissaces FX Dolby Surround encoded library” the world’s first collection of sound effects for film and television made in spatialised Dolby Surround (2001).
